The Circulation of the POST-DISPATCH in the City of St. Louis is larger than that of any other newspaper. The books of the POST-DISPATCH are always open to our advertisers, who are requested to verify for themselves our statements of Circulation.

MONDAY, AUGUST 13, 1888.

The indications for twenty-four hours, commencing at 3 p. m. to-day, for Missouri are: Fair, warmer weather; winds becoming southerly.

We do not claim that the primaries of Saturday went our way, but we claim that our reports in the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH were full and accurate.

JUDGE BARCLAY has made a dignified and creditable canvass for the Supreme Court nomination, and his name goes to Springfield with the strong endorsement of the people of St. Louis regardless of politics.

The triumph of Mayor FRANCIS in the city primaries is so complete that he might safely have let the Democratic voters hold them without interference from the City Hall pay-roll or from the Central Committee.

The venerable HANNIBAL HAMLIN says he "feels in his bones that HARRISON and MORTON will be elected." Even the goose-bone is a failure as a prophet sometimes, and as Mr. HAMLIN's bones fooled him in 1854, we can advise nobody to bet on them this time.

The people of Jacksonville, Fla., are now engaged in cleaning their streets, alleys and back yards and burning their rubbish and refuse. They are also importing a battery of artillery from Pensacola with which to try the effects of "conclusion" on the yellow fever. The best artillery to use against yellow fever is cleanliness, but it must be used before the disease has taken hold.

Mr. BLAINE has come home and told the millions of waiting and dissatisfied Republicans that they are in for it and must support HARRISON and MORTON with all the zeal and enthusiasm he can summon or simulate. But he has not yet recanted his Paris letter and told them to shout for the McKinley platform and free whisky. So they are waiting for further inspiration from their "uncrowned king."

THERE is not an honest Democratic voter in St. Louis who does not understand that the honest primaries in the majority of the wards in St. Louis were due to the persistent fight made by the POST-DISPATCH against the one-man power in ward politics. The POST-DISPATCH has never swerved from its original proposition that it would rather see its ticket defeated on a fair vote than see it succeed by any other means.

The return of the busy season in St. Louis is heralded by the announcements of the great St. Louis Fair and of the equally great St. Louis Exposition, two enterprises which are the pride of the city. The opening of the Exposition is now near at hand, its popularity is attested by the demands made by exhibitors for space, and we are requested to remind those intending to exhibit that prompt action is necessary to secure the space available.

A FEDERATION of railroad employes strong enough to stop any railroad's operations until it had conceded all the demands of a strike would beget a combination of railroads strong enough to put a stop to all railroad transportation until the strike had yielded. The public would never submit to such a deprivation. The inevitable result would be compulsory operation of the roads, with stringent laws against the molestation of any person who chose to work for them. Neither side could become master of the situation and would be compelled at last by their own interests to compromise the quarrel on some reasonable basis of mutual concession.

THE GLOBE-DEMOCRAT accuses Mr. MILLS of discriminating unfairly against Northern industries and in favor of Southern industries in his bill. It refers to his reduction of only 15 per cent in the rice duty, while he put wool on the free list, and it adds that "the greater part of the wool is produced in the North." On the contrary, only one State in the whole Union produces more wool than Mr. MILLS' own State of Texas, and the thirteen Southern States carry over 2,000,000 sheep, against only 4,000,000 in the eleven New England and Middle States. Kentucky produces more wool than any two New England States, and nearly all the hemp that is produced in the Union. When Mr. MILLS made hemp and lumber free he was aware of that fact, and of the further fact that the greatest and best forests of hardwood are in the old Slave States. While making a 12 per cent reduction in the protection of Southern rice he did not reduce at all the protection New England potatoes and grain enjoy against the importation of similar products from Canada.

SATURDAY'S RESULT.
The POST-DISPATCH has not succeeded in persuading a majority of the Democratic voters of St. Louis to support the candidate whom it preferred, but it has succeeded in establishing a principle which is of more value than the success of any candidate. This is the principle that the primaries shall be controlled and decided by the votes of the citizens, not by the manipulations of committee men nor by the influence of officials.

The majority for the Francis delegates is so large as to show that they could have safely depended on the unbiased and unprejudiced votes of the Democrats of St. Louis. Mr. FRANCIS is and has undoubtedly been all through the campaign the St. Louis favorite. But he was not certain of this and his managers from the start openly laid their plans to have Francis delegations certified to the State Convention, no matter what might be the vote cast at the primaries.

This was a programme against which the POST-DISPATCH set its face, and against which it contended alone and single handed, as it always has done—without any co-operation from any newspaper in the city, from any political organization or outside influence. On the contrary, we had to face the determined opposition of the whole press of the city, Republican as well as Democratic; of the Mayor with his subservient barnacles; of both Houses of the Municipal Assembly bent on unnecessarily degrading themselves to the small work of personal lackey service; of the Central Committee, who were heart and soul in the project of suppression, and of the Hendricks Association, the great office-grabbing organization of a spoils-hunting Democracy.

Against these controlling local partisan influences the POST-DISPATCH fought single-handed, save for the unflinching courage and valuable support of Recorder of Voters WILLIAMS, and the fight was so effectual that the party bosses did not dare to carry out their programme. With almost equal exceptions the primaries were as honest as they were peaceful and orderly. This is more than can be said of the election which placed the present city government in power. They expressed the wish of the voters, their results are accepted by the defeated side. This is victory enough for us, and it more than compensates for any disappointment in personal preferences. The POST-DISPATCH has only one policy in regard to all elections and public interests and that is the policy of honesty and fairness. With these secured the results may safely be left to take care of themselves, and the Democracy of St. Louis has gained more by holding honest primaries than it could lose by making a mistaken choice of candidates.

THE PREVALENT OPINION.

The murder of a wife by her husband is now so common an incident in the annals of crime that instead of wondering at any individual case we wonder at the prevalence of the epidemic and theorize about the causes of it. Frequently the murderer makes a satisfactory reparation to society by committing suicide, but it must be remarked that this double crime is more frequent among illicit lovers than among legal husbands. While the paragon winds up his baleful career with some ghastly form of self-destruction the lawfully married murderer rises to the full dignity of his position and after his first fright is over and he has been coached by his lawyer begins to pose as the guardian of society and the defender of household purity.

We have no theory of the reason why this form of murder should be more prevalent just now than at any other time, though there can be no question of the fact. But there is a sufficient explanation of the attitude of the murderer, and his besotted and distorted view of the relations between husband and wife is merely an exaggeration of fallacies unconsciously impressed on him by society, by the church, by the law and by all the surviving instincts of barbarism which linger amid our slowly extending civilization.

Such a brute as ANDERSON, who killed his wife on the day before the hanging of two murderers in this city, kills his wife very much as he would kill his dog. She is his personal property, his chattel; she belongs to him; he is the lord and master; her personal purity belongs to him, a violation of it is a crime against him only. To a dull mind, barely raised above the brute in intelligence and below the brute in cruelty, it is only a short step from this theory of conjugal relation to the logical application of it in the murder of the offending wife.

In spite of the apparent failure of hanging as a remedy for murder hanging is the only fit punishment for this form of murder, and we do not know whether it is to be called a failure until its remedial influence is tried more frequently. The law has provided this penalty, and its need is most strongly emphasized in the forms of crime which are most frequent, and the world will be a gainer if the wife-murderers and women-killers generally are extirpated by the gallows.

THE statement that Levi F. MORTON had been a director of the Canadian Pacific to fill only a temporary vacancy in the board turns out to be a very short-lived campaign lie. It appears that he was regularly elected with the other directors at the regular annual meeting of this foreign corporation, May 12, 1888, and was regularly re-elected at the next two succeeding annual meetings for the election of directors, May 11, 1887, and May 9, 1888. He never made a motion towards resigning his directorship till after his nomination and after the Republican Senators began to hold up the Canadian Pacific as a terrible engine of British warfare upon American commerce. Moreover, for six years preceding Mr. MORTON's election as a director, one or both of his London partners in the banking business, Mr. CHARLES DAY ROSE and Mr. PARSON DU PRE GRENELL, had been serving continuously in the Canadian Pacific directorate. They withdrew, it seems, to be succeeded by their two New York partners, Mr. LEVI F. MORTON and Mr. RICHARD J. CROSS, the latter of whom is still a director. In view of these facts Mr. MORTON's late alleged severance of his connection with that "British engine of destruction to American roads" is rather thin.

Sheridan Under Fire.
C. A. Dana in the New York Sun. After the battle of Cedar Creek, President Lincoln and Secretary Stanton agreed that Sheridan should receive some special recognition for that great exploit. They promoted him to be a Major-General in the regular army, and when the commission was made out the President decided that it should be sent to the General, who still lay near Cedar Creek, by an unusual messenger. I was selected for this agreeable duty. Grant, Sherman, Thomas, all moved among their troops with every sign of respect and confidence, on the part of the men; but in Sheridan's camp it was quite different. They seemed to regard him more as a boy regards the father he believes in, relies on and loves, than as soldiers are wont to regard their general. As we were completing our morning's tour, I had got nearly back to headquarters, I said to him: "General, how is this? These men seem to have a special affection for you, more than for any other officer here, toward any other officer. What is the reason?"

"Well," said he, "I think I can tell you. I was always right in the front rank myself. I was long convinced that it would not do for a commanding General to stay in the rear of the troops and carry on a battle with paper orders, as they do in the Army of the Potomac. These men all know that where I am, there I am, and they like it, and that is the reason they like me."

any idea of taking her policy being to tire the clerk out on this so that when she proposed a compromise on the rooms she really meant to take her would be glad to give in and get the thing settled at the price of whatever concession she asked him how long the carpets had been up; how far her windows were from the kitchen, the laundry and the stable; whether a rebate would be allowed if her daughters went to Mount Desert for a week, and whether she must pay extra if she brought a friend to dine with her. All these and a thousand questions more were patiently answered by that unlovely wretch of a clerk, and she had really relished him to a condition of such complete exhaustion before she even mentioned the suite she had from the first decided upon that he practically let her make her own terms, while he promised anything she chose to ask.

Solidarity Sentiment.
Association adopted by Mrs. veterans at Shelbyville, Ill. We believe that patriotic soldiers entered the service for the purpose of the suppression of the rebellion, and not for the purpose of being placed on the pension roll; that pensions should be drawn by those only who are entitled to them; that it should be considered an honor to be entitled to the gratuity of this nation; that, as soldiers, we honor and thank him who defends the honor of the pension roll by vetoing fraudulent claims and for promptly objecting to laws which are framed in the interest of camp followers and their co-conspirators, the pension agents.

WOMEN OF THE WORLD.
QUEEN VICTORIA is very fond of wearing monstrous straw hats. Mrs. WALTER G. GREENHAM is a slight, delicate woman, full of nerve and fire. Mrs. JULIA WARD HOWE has learned to speak French, Italian and modern Greek since her marriage.

LILLIE DEVEREUX BLAKE thinks that "every married woman should have an equal share of the family income."

LAURA JEAN LIBREY, the Brooklyn authoress, is much prostrated by the attacks made by the press on her novel, "Miss Middleton's Lover."

FOOT CARROLLA is becoming more and more thoroughly a criminal. She now refuses to wear clothing, and her attendants are obliged to use force to keep her decently covered.

HOW THREAD IS NUMBERED.

Every body knows the place of thread. Every seamstress knows whether she wants No. 30 or number, about what the size of the strand

is, and how the numbers happen to be what they are, and what they mean. But not one person in a thousand knows, and

yet it is a simple matter to explain the mystery. The thread is made by a spinning machine, and the number of spindles is the number of the thread.

THREE QUEENS.

Unhappy Histories of Women Who No Longer Sit on Thrones in Old Europe.

Three Queens have recently left Paris, after suffering from a while at the same time.

They were the Queen of Serbia, the Queen of Naples, and the Queen of Spain. The first went to The Hague and the others to Germany. Queen Natalie, says a correspondent in Paris, only remained a short time here, and was completely invisible, receiving nobody and going into no prominent place. The Queen of Naples lives in Paris with her hand all the year round. They inhabit the third floor of a house called the Hotel Voulte, and their rooms are furnished with the most simplicity, just like those inhabited by

Princess Jerome Napoleon in the Rue de Paris. The royal couple never show themselves in any public place, they never go to the theatre, a ball, a soiree, or to the theatre,

never accept any invitation, and never show themselves in any way. They are persons of their own rank and station. It is needless to say that the king and Queen of Naples would be received with the utmost cordiality, if not with the warmest welcome, in that noble apartment of the Faubourg Saint-Germain. But they never go to the aristocratic residences held during the Paris season, in that noble apartment. They prefer, in fact, a complete isolation, and a complete isolation, which is not only a pleasure, but a necessity. The king, when asked why he did not visit the city, answered that he did not wish to be seen. He has been to the city, but he has not been seen. He has been to the city, but he has not been seen. He has been to the city, but he has not been seen. He has been to the city, but he has not been seen.

He has been to the city, but he has not been seen. He has been to the city, but
